

Grade 8 Drama Presents:

YOU'RE DRIVING ME Crazy!

Most people have some funny stories about learning to drive, and driver's ed seems to add to the absurdity of this rite of passage. These scenes take a hilarious look at the world of driver's ed, especially from the instructor's perspective. In them, we meet: 1) a nervous teacher who doesn't seem to know the first thing about driving, 2) a teenage girl who brings some unexpected guests to her first driving class, and 3) a teenage girl who can't break away from her smartphone long enough to learn how to drive. You're guaranteed miles of smiles and gallons of laughter.

This important play for young children teaches a critical lesson about prejudice in a simplistic, non-preachy manner. The story is told by an old tree, who stands neglected in a park. On one side of the park live the poetry loving Greens. On the other side of the park the Blues reside, where they enjoy playing musical instruments. Sadly, there is nothing but intolerance, fear and hatred between the Greens and the Blues. Why? No one quite remembers, but these ingrained feelings diminish the quality of everybody's lives, including the poor tree, who is left abandoned in the middle. When a storm brings the aqua and purple Allina to the park, both the Greens and the Blues learn some eye-opening lessons about each other and about life. This thought-provoking piece leaves the audience ready to launch into contemplative discussions and problem solving as children explore their own beliefs about stereotyping and prejudice.

Performances are April 10 & 11
at 7:00 p.m. at WMEMS (250 Bedson Street)

Tickets are $5

www.wmems.ca

email sheri.kovacs@wmems.ca for more information